An exclusive range of kitchen utensils

Danish designer Simon Legald has created a range of kitchen utensils for Normann Copenhagen where excellent quality and exclusive natural materials go hand in hand. The Craft salt and pepper mills are now joined by a mortar with pestle and rolling pin that, just like the mills, are made for frequent everyday use.

The entire range is made of solid oak and robust marble. The utensils have a classic look and a weight that makes them comfortable to hold. The simple, flared shapes that cut across the entire range, also discretely distinguish the Craft product family traits. Simon Legald says: "The mills, mortar with pestle and rolling pin are all traditional kitchen utensils used for active jobs in the kitchen. Therefore the utensils have to be durable. Additionally, the work is done by hand, so for me it is essential that the quality can not only be seen but also felt when holding the products. The marble and oak served this purpose perfectly."

The marble handle of the rolling pin gives it a good, solid grip when using it and the hard materials make the mortar with pestle ideal for grounding all kinds of spices. Inside of the Craft Mills are ceramic CrushGrind® grinders, which have been tested to grind salt and pepper for an equivalent of up to 200 years of normal household use without showing any notable signs of wear. The respective white and black marble handles also indicate salt and pepper.

The Craft range adds a luxurious Scandinavian feel to your kitchen decor. No matter if they are standing on the table, lying in the drawer or being used, the eye is drawn to the Craft mills, rolling pin and mortar with pestle.
